On a bright and cheerful morning, the Mynas were excited about their upcoming visit to the Qutub Minar. During circle time, the teachers shared interesting facts about the historical monument. Children went to the washroom and sat down to eat their tiffin. During this time some children excitedly mentioned that they could even spot the Qutub Minar from their rooftops. Before leaving, everyone revised the safety rules for outdoor trips, such as walking in a line, staying with friends and not accepting anything from strangers etc.

With great excitement, the children of Mynas A, B, and C lined up and got onto the two buses arranged for the trip. Teachers, Didis, and parent volunteers accompanied them to ensure everyone's safety and comfort. As the buses moved towards the Qutub Minar, the atmosphere was lively with giggles, laughter and cheerful singing of "Wheels on the Bus."

Upon reaching the monument, the students gathered together at the entrance. Listening carefully to the teachers, they walked into the complex in a calm and organized manner, ready to explore the surroundings.

Their first stop was at a viewpoint where the towering Qutub Minar stood majestically against the clear blue sky.

As they walked closer, they observed the impressive height, beautiful colours, and detailed carvings on the minaret. With the teachers' guidance, they carefully counted its five storeys together.

The group then made their way to the stunning Alai Darwaza. Inside, the air felt noticeably cooler. Everyone was fascinated by the intricate designs carved into the walls, and the shaded structure provided a pleasant spot to pause and rest.

Next, they visited the remarkable Iron Pillar of Delhi, eager to learn more about its unique history. The green gardens around the Qutub Minar added to its beauty.

As the visit came to an end, the children assembled in a line and boarded their buses. On the journey back, children enjoyed biscuits and sipped water, feeling relaxed and refreshed.

After reaching school children relaxed and had their tiffin. Thereafter, the teacher gently asked children to close their eyes and recall and draw the memorable moments of their trip. They were then handed sheets of paper and encouraged to express their memories through drawings.
